NEW SCRIBNER FICTION

EDITH WHARTON'S Illustrated in color. $1.00

MADAME DE TREYMES

This brilliant story shows in the most subtle, discerning and striking way the contrast between the French and American views of family relations. Madame de Treymes is a fascinating and remarkable creation. The question of international marriage has never before been analysed in so keen and brilliant a way. It is the latest and best work of the author of "The House of Mirth."

F. HOPKINSON SMITH'S Illustrated. $1.50

THE VEILED LADY AND OTHER MEN AND WOMEN

The best new stories of the most popular of story tellers, full of humor and adventure in Venice, Stamboul, and other places.

A. T. QUILLER-COUCH'S $1.50

POISON ISLAND

A tale of treasure seeking of a highly original and absorbing kind. The individuals who make up the extraordinary band of treasure hunters, the clues that led up to the expedition, the discovery of Poison Island and what was found there make a thrilling story brightened with the whimsical humor of the delightfully unusual characters.

TO BE PUBLISHED SHORTLY

CLARA E. LAUGHLIN'S Illustrated in color. $1.50

FELICITY THE MAKING OF A STAR

A story of intense emotional power. The rise of an American actress whose talent as a comedienne develops through a series of absorbingly interesting experiences with all kinds of people and places. A love story in the midst of the emotional, picturesque, tense life of the theatre. A new kind of story in a new setting.

Beat It

By HUGH McHUGH

The latest and best from the greatest mirth provoking writer, George V. Hobart, whose "John Henry" books have already sold nearly 700,000 copies. Cloth bound, gilt top, illustrated (Issued February 20th, 1907), 75 cents.

Seth Jones of New Hampshire

By EDWARD S. ELLIS

This sterling old story published as a dime novel nearly 50 years ago, now carefully revised and practically rewritten, through many requests to its author and much editorial controversy, is here reproduced. Over 400,000 copies were sold which made it one of the most popular novels ever published. 12mo. Cloth bound, illustrated (Issued February 20th, 1907), $1.25.

The Range Dwellers

A thrilling Western story

By B. M. BOWER

Author of "Chip of the Flying U."

It is a thoroughly live story, with plenty of local color well laid on. Its people have marked characteristics, its scenes change rapidly, it possesses breeziness and a wealth of wholesome love, and its conclusion is satisfying. 12mo. Cloth bound, illustrated (Issued February 20th, 1907), $1.25.

To be Issued March 25th

The End of the Game

A Novel of American Life

By ARTHUR HORNBLOW

Author of "The Lion and the Mouse."

A powerful and admirably written story of intense human interest, dealing with the complex game of life—its vicissitudes, its sorrows, its joys, its disappointments and its triumphs. The ambition and ability that enable Roy Marshall, a newspaper reporter, to become a commanding figure in America's industrial world, the great sacrifice of his wife, Eunice, its exquisite love romance, its thrilling conflict with the strikers, its vividly drawn pictures of gay life in the metropolis—these are salient features in a masterful novel which is likely to meet with even greater success than Arthur Hornblow's last book, "The Lion and the Mouse" which is now nearing its 60th thousand. 12mo. Cloth bound, illustrated (Issued March, 1907), $1.50.

G. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY, Publishers

A brilliant young girl awakening into womanhood views herself, and determines that her beauty should get her anything from the world. She looks into "Life's Shop Window" and surveys all that her beauty entitles her to. What she buys from life is brilliantly told in this longest and most important novel by England's popular writer.

NOTES IN SEASON.

C. M. CLARK PUBLISHING COMPANY, Boston, have nearly ready a romance of South American revolution by Marshall Putnam Thompson, entitled "The Lieutenant, the Girl and the Viceroy."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish at once the eighth edition of Dr. William Elliott Griffis's authoritative work, "Korea, the Hermit Nation," which has been brought through the period of the Russo-Japanese war by a chapter on "Korea, a Japanese Protectorate." The new edition will also contain a revised map of Korea.

MCCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO. have in preparation the following fiction: "The Princess Virginia," a new story by C. N. and A. M. Williamson; "The Great American Pie Company," another clever book by Ellis Parker Butler, author of "Pigs is Pigs;" "The Trimmed Lamp, and Other Stories of the Four Million," by O. Henry; also, "The Leopard and the Lily," by Marjorie Bowen, author of "The Viper of Milan."

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have just brought out "The Steps of Life," by Carl Hilty; "Labour and Capital: a Letter to a Labour Friend," by Goldwin Smith, whose interest in the great questions of the day seems to increase rather than diminish with the passing of the years; "Van Dyck," by Lionel Cust, the foremost living authority on Van Dyck, in the series of Great Masters in Painting and Sculpture; a new and revised edition of "The Roman System of Provincial Administration," by W. T. Arnold; also, "Principles of Microscopy," by Sir A. E. Wright, M.D.

L. C. PAGE & COMPANY announce a new popular edition of Nathan Gallizier's "Castel del Monte, a Romance of the Fall of the Hohenstauffen Dynasty in Italy," which achieved marked success as a vivid and dramatic word painting of the vicious and luxurious Italian life of the thirteenth century. Mr. Gallizier has just completed the manuscript of his second volume in the trilogy of mediæval Italian life, which is laid in the year 1000, and is entitled "The Sorceress of Rome." The new book deals with the tragic love story of the boy Emperor Otto III., and Stephania, the wife of Crescentius, Senator of Rome, all famous as historical characters about whom much legend and romance has been woven.

ONE of the most important books on the spring list of Doubleday, Page & Co. is "To the Top of the Continent," in which Dr. Frederick Cook, author of "Through the Antarctic Night," will tell the story of his now famous conquest of Mt. McKinley, which carried the stars and stripes to the roof, so to speak, of North America. This expedition was full of adventure, for it also explored a vast area of hitherto unknown country which Dr. Cook believes is the last big game preserve on the continent. Dr. Cook's expedition was the first one to use a motor boat up the difficult Alaskan rivers. His ascent of Mt. McKinley in the face of almost insuperable obstacles is one of the most dramatic stories in the history of modern exploration. This book will contain the first complete map of the new Alaskan gold fields, where a great rush is expected this summer. This important volume, which will be adequately illustrated with reproductions of photographs taken by the author, will be made a part of the Geographical Library that will include Commander Peary's forthcoming book, "Nearest the Pole," and already contains, among others, "The Opening of Tibet," by Percival Landon; "Flashlights in the Jungle," by C. G. Schillings; "Fighting the Polar Ice," by Anthony Fiala; and "The Passing of Korea," by Homer D. Hulbert.

Floody, Rev. Rob. J: Scientific basis of Sabbath and Sunday: a new investigation after the manner and methods of modern science, revealing the true origin and evolution of the Jewish Sabbath and the Lord's Day, for the purpose of ascertaining their real significance and proper observance; with introd. by Granville Stanley Hall. 2d rev. ed. Bost., Herbert B. Turner & Co., 1906, [1907.] c. '01, '06. 17+359 p. O. cl., $1.50 net.

Author, who is a Boston minister, seeks to show that Sunday is not the Hebrew Sabbath, that its observance is not commanded, and yet that it is a wise and helpful human institution. He traces its history from pre-Hebrew days, pointing out the inconsistencies and bigotry regarding its observance in different ages. However, the author makes an earnest plea for a day of worship not wholly given up to pleasure, as is the trend of modern usage.

Author of "The house of a thousand candles" here deals with Austrian affairs when assassination has disposed of both the all-powerful premier and the old Emperor, and even threatens the new ruler. Success in the plot depends only on the discovery of an heir presumptive, who years ago disappeared in America. The early scenes take place in Geneva, and introduce the arch-plotter, also a mysterious John Armitage, who calls himself an American, and a fascinating American girl, and her brother of the U. S. Army. Then the action is transferred to Washington and later to the Virginia mountains, where the plotters arrange their final coup and where Armitage cleverly outwits them, thereby saving Austria's crown and clearing away the mysteries regarding himself.

"Much of history," says Dr. Osler, "is a record of the mishaps of truths which have struggled to the birth, only to die or else to wither in premature decay." Thus the lecturer, in the Harveian oration, takes Harvey's discovery of blood circulation and the reluctant acceptance of the truth by his contemporaries, as typical of the gradual acceptance of every great truth at the hands of the world.

An Australian gentleman and a London cockney, whose grandfathers had been brothers, chance to meet in England and each recognizes his own astounding likeness to the other. The Australian goes in swimming, is taken with cramps and, having been rescued by fishermen, is carried to a house where the cockney has been visiting. Meanwhile the latter, having found his cousin's clothes on the beach, concludes he is drowned, and decides to appropriate his clothes, money and name. An amusing and exasperating chain of incidents, amatory and otherwise, thereupon ensue for each cousin, introducing widely differing spheres of society, before the Australian is able to establish his identity and oust the impostor.

The Werder theory of Hamlet's procrastination, as it was first adduced in the extracts used in Dr. Furness's edition of the play, is that revenge meant to Hamlet not death, but death after confession. Thus the tragedy hangs, in Werder's opinion, upon Hamlet's use of the play to prove the king's guilt. In like manner, all of Hamlet's inaction is due, not to weakness on his part, but to circumstances beyond his control. The translation is preceded by an introduction by W. J. Rolfe which states the opinions of authorities with regard to the revolutionary German idea.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE POST OFFICE AS A BUSINESS.

THE Postal Commission's report goes to the root of postal reorganization in pleading, as did the report of the Postmaster-General, that the vast business of the post office should be handled with large business foresight. It is a great misfortune that the promotion of Mr. Cortelyou to a higher cabinet post should lose to the Post Office Department at this critical period of reorganization a head who has shown such remarkable capacity in dealing with its practical problems. Mr. Cortelyou came equipped to this work from long experience in a department which he had entered through the merit system, and it is especially to the credit of the chairman of the National Committee of a party organization that he leaves the department thoroughly based on that system, and with politics eliminated from the choice of the great body of postmasters. He has not attempted the impossible, and has perhaps not gone so far as he might in attempting the possible. But his work, and particularly his last report, affords solid basis for further improvement in the service and leaves an influence which will be permanent. It is to be hoped especially that Congress will adopt his recommendation for providing a permanent general manager for the post office business as Deputy Postmaster-General.

It is to be regretted that the Postal Commission was not constituted as originally suggested by the Postmaster-General, as the presence of members versed in the publishing business would have saved the commission from much waste of time and from some mistakes. Nevertheless, a good many facts of importance were brought out at the hearings, and the commission report gives an excellent summary of the views of the publishing interests and of commercial bodies as well as the suggestions of the Department and the recommendation of the commission itself. Unfortunately, instead of simplifying the conditions of second-class registration the commission proposals were made rather more complicated, and it seems as though it were in sheer desperation that the commission hit upon the unfortunate suggestions as to second-class matter that issues should be excluded which contained more than fifty per cent. of advertising. The opposition to the whole treatment of second-class matter has been so unanimous on the part of the press that it is understood that there will be no attempt to carry through the accompanying bill except in one or two of its provisions.

The hearings brought out one fact of great interest, bearing upon this very point—that second-class matter is the chief money-getter for the Post Office Department because the advertisements involve so large a return in first-class rates. It is probable, in fact, that the "mail order" periodicals, which are the bete noir of the department, constitute one of the most profitable auxiliaries of the service. Mr. Atkinson, of the Farm Journal, scores a good point in asking why he should not be permitted to publish a paper for a penny, (his rate to five-year subscribers being 15 cents a year,) as well as the publisher of the yellow daily Journal in New York; and, in fact, his Farm Journal is one of the most valuable publications in the country for the whole country and one of the best money-getters for the post office business.

The suggestion for a Post Office Board of Appeals is an improvement on present methods, and in particular would relieve Mr. Madden, who is an able administrative official, from the burden and obloquy he now endures; but it is scarcely the best solution. The commission states, however, that its present recommendations are provisional, and it wisely appeals for further and larger consideration of present and future problems.

The commission at its hearings declined to hear argument as to postal costs, although it dealt chiefly with postal rates and emphasized the view that matter of the second class was carried below cost. Its report, however, deals frankly, though inadequately, with the railroad problem, and advises an immediate, though inadequate reduction of rates. There is common sense recognition of the facts that small shipments cost more than large, and that beyond a certain point, estimated at forty tons, there is not much saving. If the facts of express companies' relations with railroads are put in evidence, it is an enforced conclusion that the government compensation to the railroads should for the most part be cut in half. The weighing and counting recommended are of first importance, although it is difficult to see how this can be persistently done under the chronic congestion of the main post office at New York.

It remains to be said, however, after all criticism of details, that the commission has taken a long stride forward in "speaking out" in favor of a business administration of the largest business organization in the country. It is to be hoped that Congress will heed its warning and accept its advice for the appointment of a commission of still wider scope, so that before the close of the present administration we may have a reorganized department which shall lead instead of tag behind the postal departments of other nations.

THE presentation of a minority report from the Senate Committee on Patents favoring the House provision as to the rights of musical composers further complicates the copyright situation and makes the passage of the copyright measure at the present session more than doubtful. There is general appreciation of the excellent work put upon the measure by the committees, but several of the provisions evoke continued criticism from the friends of copyright as they are studied. The American Copyright League declares in favor of the Senate bill, but points out that an alternative term, preferably of fifty years, is a necessary concomitant of the life and thirty years term, urges that the original text of works in a language other than English be excepted from the manufacturing clause, and emphasizes the importance of the existing minimum of $250 damages omitted from the present measure. The American Publishers' Copyright League criticises chiefly the omission of the proviso joining assigns with author in the prolongation of existing copyrights.

POSTAL COMMISSION RETREATS.

THE Joint Congressional Postal Commission, it is reported, has practically decided to abandon nearly all its recommendations which affect daily and weekly newspapers. This sudden change of front on the part of the commission is said to be due largely to the severe criticism of the proposed changes in the regulations that have been made by the newspapers, in the face of which it was thought the passage of the Commission's bill at the present session of Congress would be impossible.

It was therefore decided to abandon the proposed changes that affect those classes of papers. The commission, however, will press its recommendation for the exclusion of advertising matter from transportation at second class rates and for the reduction of the rates paid the railroads.

THE COMMERCIALIZATION OF LITERATURE.

MR. HENRY HOLT, in summing up, in the current issue of Putnam's Monthly, the discussion of his article in the Atlantic Monthly for November, 1905, on "The Commercialization of Literature," again directs his shafts against the "literary agent," whom he holds responsible for a great part of the commercialization of literature.

"I mean," Mr. Holt says, "that the [literary] agent's interest may be as far counter to the author's as the publisher's may be; and I also mean that the publisher's can be as nearly identical with the author's as the agent's can; and I further mean that agents have forced over-production by selling several of an author's books before they were written, and dazzling him with forced earnings from forced work, followed by inferior earnings from inferior work."

Mr. Holt's literary-agent-critic of the Fortnightly Review makes several statements of the value of literary agents which Mr. Holt considers erroneous, because they do not seem to be based upon actual experience. Both Mr. Holt and his critic agree that it is advantageous for an author to keep to one publisher; but the critic maintains that through a literary agent an author can "get the best market price" for his work. To this Mr. Holt replies that manuscripts are not rationally priced as is a keg of nails or a pound of sugar, but that writings are worth only what they bring, this price being determined by the "accidents of the time."

"There are ambitious and reckless publishers," says Mr. Holt, "and those who from youth or some other reason are sadly in need of authors, all of whom to get good authors will give anything they can, utterly regardless of results." Although the agent may hunt up such people for his author, there is no "rational market price" in their offers.

Often a publisher "of freebooting disposition" will offer an author utterly uncommercial rates for the book rights of matter offered for serialization. In such a case the author's regular publisher would be apt to refuse to bid against the "corsair." How, then, asks Mr. Holt, about reserving one publisher and at the same time securing "the benefits of competition"? The agent, in his desire to appear to be doing something, is often undermining the foundations of the author's permanent financial well-being.

"Another of the ear-marks of our honest writer's [the Fortnightly Review critic's] apparent inexperience," according to Mr. Holt, "is the supposition that an agent can go around the market and get bids against the author's previous publisher when it is known that he will not take the author away if he can help it. And if he can, what self-respecting publisher will listen to his proposition? Occasionally one will, but these are not so numerous to-day as they were a few years ago.

"These facts do not mean that an author should have a single publisher, no literary agent, and do without the benefit of competition. For in an author's relation with publishers of the highest class . . . the question has no place. He [the author] ought to get the results of what the published book will do in the market." Good publishers contract as a rule by formulas which secure to the author gains corresponding to the sale of the book after it has been published. The publishers pay, say, ten per cent. on the first five thousand, fifteen per cent. on the next fifteen thousand, and twenty per cent. after twenty thousand. These terms are as high as can be given, consistent with making the publishing business worth an able man's attention.

If an author needs any help whatever in the business side of his work, he may get an honest lawyer to arrange matters for him for a tenth of what an agent often receives, and that without the commercialization attendant upon the latter's actions.

"My critic tacitly admits," says Mr. Holt, "that he thinks that the way in which the agents have made much, probably most, of their money is not consistent with his ideas of right; they have not even tried to give the author the benefit of competition, and leave him the benefit of one high class publisher."

As to the "circus" method of advertising books, Mr. Holt continues: "I want, even at the cost of some repetition of my former article, to say another word about the crowding of books into circulation by the megaphone and the battering ram. The literary standards of people are of course affected by what they read, and what they read is too much determined by the publisher who brays loudest and pounds hardest. Instead of the reader being permitted to follow such lights as the grace of God and his education may have given him, he is dinned, and the bookseller who influences him is cajoled, into following a standard set purely by the forces of dollars and cents—often wasted dollars and cents. And now I am going to add one more to my radical utterances. It would be an immense gain for the cause of literature and to the profit of all worthy authors, (though at the expense of unworthy ones,) if the 'commercial enterprise' that has come in from Wall Street and the energetic West were taken out of the publishing business—if the competition consisted simply in selecting books wisely, making them tastefully and honestly, informing the interested public of their existence, and supplying them to whatever legitimate demand they might effect through their own merits. There would probably be just as many sold—more, in fact; for the reading habit would be a healthier and consequently more vigorous growth; there would be quantities of money saved, of which the author would get his share; a good many active and ingenious young men now wasted in drumming and advertising would be shifted into productive pursuits; and the public taste would be saved the unpleasant sights now too frequently imposed upon it in book advertising. It may be worth considering, too, whether the dignity that would be added to trading in literature would not be for the benefit of literature itself."

Mr. Holt has again offered material for useful thought in his clear manner of statement and terse English.

THE FOLLY OF UNDERSELLING.

The following circular sent to the members of the Pittsburg Booksellers' and Stationers' Association evidences a spirit that might well be emulated by other associations or individuals throughout the country:

Gentlemen: If one dealer sells a dollar article for 90 cents, the others meet the price and what has been accomplished?

N I T—Positively N I T.

No advantage accrues to the originator of the reduction. It's not even an "ad," for he offers no inducements whatever over those of his competitors; on the contrary, all suffer alike by reason of the uncalled for reduction.

If your neighbor reduces a price unduly on goods that you handle, why not see him in a neighborly way and have him restore the rate to a paying basis?

Or, are you willing to refer such price matters and misunderstandings to a committee of three competent stationers and abide by their decision?

Prices are advancing in all other lines; why should not the stationer reap his harvest now? He is paying new-style prices for his goods and selling them at old-fashioned figures.

Are you willing to come together once a month for a light fifty-cent lunch at six p.m. and a two hours' consideration of prices. improvements in business methods, discussions of "What is cost?" etc., etc.

Or will you suggest something better?

An early reply is earnestly requested by

Charles H. Clough, 900 Penn Avenue.

THE SHELLEY NOTE BOOKS IN NEW YORK.

The three Shelley manuscript note books which brought £3000 at the Garnett sale on December 6 last, have been brought to this country to become part of a New York collection of the poet's books and autographs, very likely of that of Frederick R. Halsey, whose Shelley collection is said to be the finest existing in private hands. These volumes, bequeathed by Mrs. Shelley to her son, Sir Percy Shelley, and presented by him to Dr. Garnett, contain autograph matter of much interest and include early drafts of the "Ode to the West Wind," "The Sensitive Plant," etc., together with twenty-one unpublished pieces.

While the unprinted poems are short and fragmentary, and possibly if published would add little to the poet's reputation, the mere fact that they are Shelley's gives them literary and commercial value. The other notebooks are all in the Bodleian Library in Oxford, and English bibliographical writers regret that the Garnett examples were not purchased for that institution.

The Halsey collection and some important Shelley items in the collection f Harry D. Smith, of New York City, the comic librettist, are interestingly described in the New York Sun for January 13.

OBITUARY NOTES.

Mrs. Isabella Beecher Hooker, the youngest daughter of Lyman Beecher, died in Hartford, Conn., January 26, in her eighty-fifth year, having been born at Litchfield, Conn., on February 22, 1822. She was active for years as a writer and speaker in defense of women's rights.

Dr. Wilbur Samuel Jackman, educator and writer, died at Chicago, on January 28.

Dr. Jackman was born at Mechanicstown, O., January 12, 1855. He studied at Allegheny College and completed his course at Harvard in 1884. After several years of travel he accepted the position of dean of the College of Education of the University of Chicago. Dr. Jackman was well known in the literary field as the editor of the Elementary School Teacher, and as the author of numerous works on education, among which are "Nature Study for the Common Schools," "Number Work in Nature Study," "Field Work in Nature Study," "Nature Study and Related Subjects," and "Nature Study Records," besides numerous articles on educational subjects.

PROFESSOR DMITRI MENDELÉEFF, the celebrated Russian chemist, died on February 2, at St. Petersburg. He was born in Tobolsk, Siberia, in 1834, and went to St. Petersburg in 1856, where he attended the university from which he was graduated in 1859. After studies and investigations abroad he returned to St. Petersburg and devoted his life to original research in chemistry and geology. His "Principles of Chemistry," published in 1870, was translated into many languages, and he was a frequent contributor to scientific periodicals. He was the author of several papers on nitro-cellulose compounds as a basis for smokeless gunpowder, some of which were translated into English by Commander J. B. Bernadou, U. S. N., and published in the "Proceedings of the Naval Institute."

SAMUEL C. T. DODD, for upwards of twenty-five years solicitor for the Standard Oil Company and author of certain widely-circulated so-called "trust" literature, died in Pinehurst, N. C., on January 30. Mr. Dodd was born on February 20, 1836, in Franklin, Pa., and was admitted to the bar in 1859. In 1881 he became general solicitor for the Standard Oil Company, and is said to have been an important factor in extending the business of the corporation. He was retired two years ago on a pension. Among his better known writings are "Uses and Abuses of Corporations," a pamphlet; "History of Standard Oil;" "Trusts," a pamphlet; "Trusts," contributed to the New York Tribune in 1889; "Aggregated Capital," "Ten Years of Standard Oil Trust," published in The Forum in 1893, and "Present Legal Status of Trusts," contributed to The Harvard Law Review in October, 1893.

NOTES ON AUTHORS

WHILE engaged on his biography of Molière Mr. Chatfield-Taylor gathered together some five hundred volumes relating to the great dramatist. This collection, which its owner has presented to Cornell University, his alma mater, is said to have only one superior in the United States—that of James H. Hyde.

The Bookman corrects the impression prevalent for some time that Filson Young, the author of "The Sands of Pleasure," and Guy Thorne, the author of "Made in His Image," are one and the same person. "As a matter of fact," to quote The Bookman, "they are entirely different persons, and each has done enough work to distinguish him from any one else. Filson Young, or rather Alexander Bell Filson Young, is an Irishman about thirty years of age. He was the war correspondent of the Manchester Guardian during the struggle in the Transvaal, and later became the literary editor of the London Daily Mail. He has published half a dozen books, the best known of which, before the appearance of "The Sands of Pleasure," was "The Complete Motorist," a book which was not only of a high order in itself, but which contained a very extraordinary letter from Mr. Kipling, that was widely quoted in this country and in England. "Guy Thorne's" real name is Cyril Arthur Edward Ranger Gull. He is about the same age as Filson Young. He was educated in a public school near Manchester, and at the University College, Oxford. From the university he went to London with Professor York Powell and others, and tried his hand at journalism and literary criticism. Over his own name he published several novels, among them "The Surf" and "The Hypocrite." He achieved his first real success over the signature of "Guy Thorne," which he adopted for books designed to appeal to the popular taste. His real name he uses for the work in which he puts his artistic self. His most popular novel was "When It Was Dark," which sold over one hundred thousand copies in England.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE publication in the March Century of Timothy Cole's wood engraving of Ribera's "Assumption of Mary Magdalene" will conclude that engraver's notable series of old Spanish masters, twenty-nine in all. Mr. Cole has already commenced work upon a new series, that of the old French masters, reproductions of which will begin in the April Century.

THE Burlington Magazine, published in this country by Robert Grier Cooke, Inc., New York City, enters the new year with remarkably strong attractions. The frontispiece of the January issue is a photogravure reproduction of the landscape, "The Storm," by H. Harpignies; the illustrated article on the veteran painter's works is by Professor C. J. Holmes. A colored illustration reproduces a colored print by the distinguished Japanese artist Hokusai. It is one of his famous series, "Thirty-six Views of Fuji," and is accompanied by an explanatory article. There are also illustrated articles on London's new public buildings, the embroideries of the Aegean, on some of the works of Palma, Vecchio, etc. In the section on art in America all recent exhibitions and events in the United States, as well as information of vital art interest, have been gathered together. Especial interest attaches to the notice of the famous collections belonging to John G. Johnson, of Philadelphia, and to William L. Elkins and P. B. Widener, who may in the near future join with Mr. Johnson in presenting an art gallery to Philadelphia.

OLD BOOK NOTES.

CORRESPONDENCE OF LUTHER AND HENRY VIII.—A hitherto unknown copy of the Latin correspondence between Luther and King Henry VIII. was sold at auction at Sotheby's on January 29. The correspondence concerns the time when King Henry, prior to the English Reformation, won the title of Defender of the Faith, which has since been borne by all British sovereigns, from Pope Leo X. for attacking Luther's new theology. Luther's vigorous rejoinder is contained in the exclamation: "Oh, how I should enjoy covering the head of his English Majesty with dirt and filth." The correspondence was printed by Pynson in London in 1525. Only three copies were known of before. The fourth copy was bought on behalf of Mr. Quaritch for $1275.

RARE TENNYSONIANA.—At the sale of the collection of Albert E. Jack, of Lake Forest University, Ill., at Anderson's this week, an uncut copy of "The Falcon," in the original blank buff paper covers, printed for copyright or for use of the Kendals, who acted it in December, 1879, fetched $200. "The Cup," in uncut condition, the third of Tennyson's privately printed plays, written for Henry Irving and Ellen Terry, who performed it on Christmas day, 1880, brought $180. "The Promise of May," the rarest of Tennyson's privately printed plays, produced at the Globe Theatre in London in 1882, sold for $180. A copy of the first published edition of "The Cup" and "The Falcon," London, 1884, fetched $100. "The Sailor Boy," printed for Tennyson's use by the Emily Faithfull Victoria Press, London, 1861, sold for $100. "Poems. By Two Brothers," written by Alfred and Charles Tennyson, and the former's first publication, London, 1827, sold for $65. The bibliophilic rage for Tennyson rarities is not so great as is was a few years ago, these figures being much below those paid for the same works in the Morgan and Arnold sales.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

THE Carnegie Institution has issued an announcement to the effect that unless it appears that the Index Medicus is "of greater service to the medical profession and can help to support itself to a greater extent than in the past, it may become advisable to discontinue its publication." There are but 532 actual subscribers to the Index Medicus, of which number 386 are in the United States. These subscriptions defray but one-fifth of the actual cost of publishing this valuable bibliographic work, which should have a subscriber in every medical library of any size throughout the whole world, as well as in the libraries devoted to the allied sciences, the law libraries, medical societies, the general libraries and individual members of the medical profession.

THE Börsenblatt für den deutschen Buchhandel in its issues for December 28 and 29, 1906, prints a bibliography of the following government publications: Calendars of State Papers; Lists and Indexes of Documents preserved in the Public Record Office; Acts of Privy Council of England; Chronicles and Memorials of Great Britain and Ireland during the Middle Ages—Rerum Britannicarum Medii Aevi Scriptores; Publications of Record Commissioners, including Scottish and Irish; and Works in Photozincography, prepared by P. E. Richter. These publications are usually relegated to the appendixes of the English Catalogue and there given under the names of the societies, so that the titles are not easily accessible.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BOSTON, MASS.—The Grafton Press has established a branch office here at No. 6 Beacon Street to look after its large and growing genealogical and historical department.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Geyer's Stationer has opened an office in the Baltimore Building, at 17 Quincy Street, in charge of Albert B. Abrams, for the transaction of its Western business.

DETROIT, MICH.—John V. Sheehan & Co. will remove their stock of books and stationery to 178 Woodward Avenue, where they will have larger and more commodious quarters for their growing business.

HAMPTON, IA.—Miss M. L. Adams has given a bill of sale to her book and stationery store.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Booksellers' Protective and Collecting Association has incorporated with a capital of $500. The directors are M. C. Piers, 538 Lenox Avenue; S. F. Areson, and J. M. Carter, all of New York City.

NEW YORK CITY.—In noticing the purchase, by Charles L. Bowman & Co., of the retail department of J. A. Hill & Co., in our last week's issue, the linotype confused our announcement by translating the firm name Charles L. Brown & Co., though a few lines further on the name of the senior member of the firm was given correctly as Charles L. Bowman. The error was so obvious that correction seems hardly necessary; nevertheless, the trade should bear in mind that it is Charles L. Bowman & Co. who have succeeded to the retail business of J. A. Hill & Co., and not another concern.

NORWICH, N. Y.—H. H. Higley, bookseller, has been succeeded by William Griffing.

PERU, NEB.—John Patterson, bookseller, has sold out to Mrs. K. Brundson.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE JOHN LANE COMPANY announce a volume of poems, entitled "The Soul's Progress," by Louis V. Ledoux; also, "Old English Wood Carving," by Margaret F. Malim.

WILLIAM BURGYES HADLEY, well known to the trade through his connection with H. S. Stone & Co., and more recently with Grosset & Dunlap, has been appointed manager of the American branch of Cassell & Company, Limited, and will assume charge on February 11.

WILLIAM J. NAGEL, 6 Ashburton Place, Boston, will publish on the 15th inst. the "Annotated Supplement to the Massachusetts Revised Laws," 1902-1906, compiled by John H. Peck, who was associated with the Commission for the Consolidation and Arrangement of the Public Statutes which reported to the Legislature the draft of the Revised Laws of 1902.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS has just brought out in its World Classics Scott's "Lives of the Novelists," with introduction by Austin Dobson; Thackeray's "Pendennis," with introduction by Edmund Gosse; Sheridan's "Plays," with introduction by Joseph Knight; Oliver Wendell Holmes's "The Poet" and "The Professor at the Breakfast Table," with introductions by Dr. W. Robertson Nicoll; and another volume of Burke's complete works.

THOMAS WHITTAKER has just published, preparatory to Lent and for special use during that season, a number of books, among which are "Briefs for Our Times," by the Rev. Morgan M. Sheedy; "Churchmanship and Labor," by Scott Holland, Percy Dearmer and others; "The King and His Kingdom," by the Dean of Carlisle; "Readings and Prayers for Every Day in Lent," "The Restitution of All Things," by S. Baring-Gould; and "Twelve Gates of the Holy City," by Canon Bodington.

GINN & COMPANY have printed in their text-book bulletin Professor George Lyman Kittredge's monograph on "Some Landmarks in the History of English Grammars," of which a limited number of copies will be sent postpaid to any address. They have also just ready "Types and Breeds of Farm Animals," by Professor Charles S. Plumb, of the Ohio State University, the first of the Country Life Education Series, and the first on the subject published since 1888. Ripley's "Railway Problems," which is nearly ready, treats of the economic and political question of the relation of railways to the State.

THE COLLECTOR AND ART CRITIC COMPANY, No. 1 Madison Avenue, New York City, will publish immediately under the title of "Whistler's Notes and Footnotes, and Other Memoranda," by "A. E. G.," a set of about a dozen "essays in little" concerning themselves with certain phases of modern art. Several of these essays have Whistler for their subject, while Leonardo da Vinci and Puvis de Chavannes as caricaturists, Bernard Boutet de Monvel, Beardsley, Everett Shinn and Childe Hassam suggest the range of the other papers. Numerous plates of an unusual character enrich the volume, including two hitherto unpublished works by Whistler, one of which, a unique study of flowers, is reproduced in colors.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & CO. will publish in March "The Ministry of David Baldwin," by Henry T. Colestock, a novel dealing with the life struggle of a young clergyman who could not suppress the truth, in which is outlined in an intensely human manner the conflict between old school theologians and modern critics, with illustrations by E. Boyd Smith; "Orthodox Socialism," by James Edward Le Rossignol, professor in the University of Denver, widely known for his books and lectures on economic subjects, who in his new book approaches a great subject from a new viewpoint, and discusses it in a fair-minded, thorough-going way; "Christ's Secret of Happiness," by Dr. Lyman Abbott, a suggestive book in an optimistic vein, written in the author's ablest manner, and of special value for Easter gifts; "The Greatest Fact in Modern History," by the Hon. Whitelaw Reid, Ambassador to Great Britain, who shows in a rapid, but clean-cut survey of historic events what the "fact" is; also, "The Religious Value of the Old Testament," by Ambrose White Vernon, professor in Dartmouth College, whose book profits by the light modern criticism and research has thrown on the Bible and its manner of authorship in an important way.

THE BAKER & TAYLOR COMPANY have in preparation for the spring and summer the following books: "The Gothic Quest," a special plea for the use of Gothic architecture in this country, by Ralph Adams Cram, of the well-known Boston firm of Cram, Goodhue & Ferguson, who have recently come into more than usual prominence by receiving the contract for the magnificent new Gothic buildings of the United States Military Academy at West Point, and author of "Impressions of Japanese Architecture;" "Dimbie and I," a new book by Mrs. Mabel Barnes-Grundy, whose "Hazel of Heatherland" won for her the affection of discerning readers; "Art Principles in Portrait Photography," by Otto Walter Beck, Instructor of Art in Pratt Institute of Brooklyn, which treats of the processes of dealing with backgrounds and the manipulation of the plate with a view of obtaining effects said to be hitherto unknown in photography; "The Sowing of Alderson Cree," by Miss Margaret Prescott Montague, author of that charming idyllic novel, "The Poet, Miss Kate and I," who in her new work tells a feud story different from its predecessors in similar fields in that the scene is laid in the West Virginia mountains and the feud, begun under a misapprehension, ends in a dramatic situation totally unexpected; also, "The Golden Hawk," a story of Provence in the present day, by Edith Rickert, author of "Folly," with illustrations by Stanislaus Benda. David Belasco, the versatile manager playwright, has collaborated with Charles A. Byrne in compiling a series of unusual fairy tales. These have been published in New York with the imprint of the Baker & Taylor Co., under the title of "A Book of Fairy Tales." As might be expected, the book has the well-known Belasco touch, and is fully illustrated by George Bleekman.

Doubleday, Page & Co. will bring out on the 26th inst. Thomas W. Lawson's Wall Street novel, "Friday, the 13th," which will have a frontispiece drawn by Ivanowski, the famous Russian artist, whose most recent work to attract attention was the painting of Maude Adams in "Peter Pan" that appeared in The Century. They will publish in March, under the title of "Nearest the Poles," Commander Peary's complete story of his latest Arctic expedition. On this trip Peary did for the American segment of the Polar Basin what Nansen did for the Asiatic. The narrative is said to be exceedingly dramatic. Peary has been north seven times, oftener than any other explorer, and the Hubbard Gold Medal presented by President Roosevelt on behalf of the National Geographical Society is the fiftieth he has received for his distinguished achievements in exploration. His discoveries are of marked importance and will add greatly to geographic knowledge. There will be an introduction by President Roosevelt. The work will be adequately illustrated from the collection of 1200 photographs taken by Commander Peary. They also announce for early publication a new book by Edward Noble, author of "The Edge of Circumstance," to be entitled "The Issue." It is a story of two strong men who struggle for a woman's love, of which the scenes are laid along the Thames among the sturdy folk of the sea. Another book soon to make its appearance is "Nimrod's Wife," by Grace Gallatin Thompson Seton. It is in a sense a companion book to the author's successful book, "A Woman Tenderfoot," and gives an account of her trips with her artist-author husband, full of practical and suggestive hints to the increasing number of women who find pleasure in out-of-door expeditions. The various chapters are as follows: In the Sierras, In the Rockies, On the Ottawa, and In Norway. The volume will be illustrated by Walter King Stone.

The Macmillan Company's list of fiction for the coming spring includes a new novel by Marion Crawford, "Prima-Donna," which is said to be a sequel to "Fair Margaret;" Jack London's romance of prehistoric man, "Before Adam;" "The Gulf," a story in comedy vein, by John Luther Long; and "Poppea of the Post Office," by the author of "The Garden of a Commuter's Wife." Besides these there is "Spirit Lake," a story of the Northwest Indians, by Arthur Heming, the well-known illustrator; "The Kinsman," by Mrs. Alfred Sidgwick, a favorite English author; "Family Secrets," by Marion Foster Washburne, and volumes of short stories by Israel Zangwill and Jack London. Under the heading of Poetry and Belles-Lettres, announcement is made of a new dramatic poem by Stephen Phillips, a second volume of verse by Alfred Noyes, the second volume of the collected edition of W. B. Yeats's "Lyrical and Dramatic Poems," and a new dramatic poem, "Sappho and Phaon," by Percy Mackaye. The Modern Reader's Bible is to be issued in a single volume, two additions are promised to the Macmillan series of Plays by Clyde Fitch, "Her Own Way" and "The Girl and the Judge," and an important critical work by Professor George P. Baker is entitled "The Development of Shakespeare as a Dramatist." In Biography their list is headed by the "Life and Letters of Edwin Lawrence Godkin," in two volumes, edited by Rollo Ogden, editor of the New York Evening Post. A number of new volumes are promised in the English Men of Letters series, including one on "Emerson," by Professor George E. Woodberry. In history the list is long and imposing. The completion of Professor Smyth's edition of "The Life and Writings of Benjamin Franklin" is promised, and new volumes are forthcoming in Professor Channing's "History of the United States," Dr. Lea's "History of the Inquisition of Spain," Professor Osgood's "The American Colonies in the Seventeenth Century," and The Cambridge Modern History. A fresh and interesting subject is exploited by Professor Edmond S. Meany, of the University of Washington, in an account of "Vancouver's Discovery of Puget Sound."

The Golden Treasury of Irish Songs and Lyrics

Edited by CHARLES WELSH

Two Volumes. Cloth. $2.50

THIS anthology presents the best examples of Irish Songs and Lyrics from the earliest Bardic literature, the folk songs, street ballads and patriotic poetry; the pathetic, romantic and sentimental poetry; the humorous and convivial verse with which the Irish literature abounds, and the refined, tender and mystical spirit which breathes in the poetry of the Irish Renaissance of to-day.

In compiling this collection the editor has had the advantage of the critical judgment of some of the foremost Irish scholars and poets, among whom may be mentioned Dr. Douglas Hyde, Stephen Lucine Gwynn, Lady Gregory, D. J. O'Donoghue, as well as the best English scholars on this side of the Atlantic, including Professor F. N. Robinson, who occupies the Celtic chair at Harvard University; Dr. Maurice F. Egan, of the Catholic University, in Washington; S. R. Richardson.

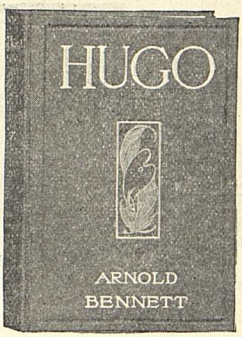
A NEW NOVEL BY A NEW WRITER

HUGO By ARNOLD BENNETT

12mo. Cloth, Gilt top - - - $1.50

A NOVEL OF MODERN TIMES AND THEMES



IN this story of "Hugo," Arnold Bennett has adroitly contrived to combine two of the most popular phases of modern fiction —the commercial romance and the detective tale. Hugo, the central character, is founder and proprietor of the greatest department store on earth, a London establishment which combines every retail function. The action of the story begins with Hugo's sudden infatuation for a beautiful girl in his millinery department; from this start, the plot proceeds to interweave until it accumulates mysteries within mysteries and would puzzle the most inveterate student of the intricacies of crime. —San Francisco Chronicle.

NEW YORK "SUN"—Very interesting,—carries the reader along breathlessly.

BOSTON "TRANSCRIPT."—The story is clever.

NEW YORK "HERALD"—If you want excitement, Mr. Bennett is the man for your money.

CHICAGO "INTER-OCEAN"—Decidedly out of the ordinary * * * Exciting reading from beginning to end.

NEW YORK "EVENING SUN"—A clever tale.

NEW YORK "NATION"—It is as fantastic, as adventurous, as disconcerting as any of Stevenson's inventions.

"BOOK-NEWS"—If you want a thriller with a complicated plot, try Hugo.

"PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY"—The plot is ingenious and exciting.

THE question of our right to use Webster's name on a Webster Dictionary having just been judicially determined in our favor in the United States Courts

THE PUBLISHER OF OGILVIE'S SERIES OF

Genuine Webster Dictionaries

takes pleasure in offering to the trade, in addition to

which, we think, needs no introduction—the three following

New Genuine Webster's

EACH PRINTED ON BIBLE PAPER

Webster's Inter-Collegiate Dictionary	1,200 pages; size, $5\frac{1}{8} \times 7\frac{3}{4} \times 1\frac{3}{8}$ inches; weight, 25 ounces -	Leather, $2.50 Cloth, 1.75
Webster's Adequate Dictionary	675 pages; size, $5\frac{1}{8} \times 7\frac{3}{4} \times \frac{3}{4}$ inches; weight, 13 ounces -	Leather, 1.75 Cloth, 1.25
Webster's Sterling Dictionary	550 pages; size, $3\frac{3}{8} \times 5\frac{1}{2} \times \frac{5}{8}$ inches; weight, $5\frac{1}{4}$ ounces -	Leather, 1.00 Cloth, .60

INDEXING 25 cents per copy extra

Printing these three dictionaries on Bible paper insured the production of very compact books, containing everything that lexicons twice their size could possibly contain if printed on ordinary book paper.

Ogilvie's Webster series consists of four books: (1) Webster's IMPERIAL Dictionary and its abridgments, which are as follows: (2) Webster's INTER-COLLEGIATE Dictionary, (3) Webster's ADEQUATE Dictionary, and (4) Webster's STERLING Dictionary.

The accuracy, reliability and excellence of the "Imperial" is thus secured for the entire series, all four books having been prepared with unremitting care under the supervision and close personal attention of Thomas H. Russell, LL.B., Editor-in-Chief.

Send orders to your jobber, or direct to the publisher, and include in your order a supply of WEBSTER'S "IMPERIAL," which retails at $5.00 in sheep and $8.00 in Russia binding. Liberal trade discounts on all of our dictionaries.
